

Forecast For East Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 03 Mar 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Another grey, murky and cold day. Perhaps a few showers.

Today:

A grey and murky start, with extensive low cloud and fog, which will slowly lift to give some bright or occasional sunny spells, especially inland. Staying murky on the coast. Perhaps a few showers moving up from the south later. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Tonight:

Cloudy with some showers moving east during the evening. Cloud increasing across most parts overnight with areas of low cloud, mist and fog. Perhaps some patchy drizzle at times. Minimum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Thursday:

After a grey and murky start on Thursday, a band of occasional rain will move steadily southwards during the afternoon, weakening as it does so. Drier and colder by evening. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:

High pressure will bring fine, dry and settled conditions on Friday and into the weekend. Decent spells of sunshine by day, with widespread frosts overnight. Feeling cold.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.